1. Sampurna, a renowned film star of sixteen years, wanted a small party house and a swimming pool constructed in her back garden. By misrepresenting that she is a major, she put the task out to tender and accepted the offer of Mr. Banerjee, a building contractor, who agreed to do the work for Rs. 5,00,000/-.

2. Both Sampurna and Mr. Banerjee knew that this was an unrealistically low price contract and the amount will be paid in instalments in order of the completion of different phases of the assigned work. Banerjee, having completed the small party house began construction of the swimming pool and ran out of money and materials for further construction. Mr. Banerjee told Sampurna that he could not complete the construction unless further capital was made available to him.

3. Sampurna had arranged a poolside party to which she had invited top film directors from whom she hoped to win new leading roles and was desperate to have the pool completed as stipulated. She requested for the continuance of the construction work and further requested Mr. Banerjee to spend the remaining amount of Rs. 3,00,000/- on the work out of his own pocket and the money would be paid to him when she secures her next contract.

4. The pool was completed; the party was a success and Sampurna was awarded the starring role in a new movie. Sampurna tells Mr. Banerjee, "You have saved my career. Don't worry about Rs. 3,00,000/-"

5. Mr. Banerjee started a new project, whereas Sampurna's new film was a complete flop. She then found herself unable to pay the amount of Rs. 3,00,000/- to Mr. Banerjee.

6. Mr. Banerjee compelled Sampurna, a leading film actor, to render dance performance in his party which he organized to invite rich people, relatives and friends in order to secure contracts regarding building construction, etc. and in return he agreed to release Sampurna from paying the debts of Rs. 3,00,000/- Sampurna agreed on this point and was ready for the dance performance in the party. But before the party, she suffered from a sprain due to over repetition of rehearsals. Then she did not perform in Mr. Banerjee's party on the advice of the doctor.

7. On Sampurna's eighteenth birthday, both the parties, on the humanity ground, decided to alter the contract. Sampurna acknowledged the debt taken from Mr. Banerjee for rendering the past services and further both agreed on the same point that Sampurna would pay the debt through easy monthly instalments (EMIs) of Rs. 10,000/- per month till the repayment of the amount of Rs. 3,00,000/-.

8. Sampurna, later on, felt that some of the work done by Mr. Banerjee was not performed as she had specified. She further pointed out that the material used for constructing the small party house and a swimming pool was not of the right kind. She estimated that this would cost her Rs. 3,50,000/- only.

9. Sampurna then decided to dispose-off her property at the price of Rs. 9,00,000/- without giving a single penny to Banerjee. When all this foul play came to the knowledge of Banerjee, he tried to restrain Sampurna by putting enormous pressure in order to recover his money amounting to Rs. 3,00,000/- which he spent on the construction of small party house and a swimming pool for Sampurna.

10. Banerjee could not recover the debt from Sampurna even after a reasonably long time. He gave a notice to Sampurna regarding payment of money within 15 days but no reply was given by her on this matter.

11. In this context Banerjee finally decided to go to the court for seeking remedy in this regard. The suit was then filed in the District Court by Banerjee on the ground that he had constructed the small party house and a swimming pool as per the terms of the contract and has taken all the diligent steps to recover the loan made available to Sampurna for Rs. 3,00,000/- and she refused to pay the said amount.

12. The Ld. District Judge dismissed the suit citing, inter alia, Section 11 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 and the landmark case, Mohori Bibee v. Dharmodas Ghose. Mr. Banerjee, preferring an appeal, has now brought the matter before the High Court at Calcutta.
